OLD MAN RIVER JUST KEPT ROLLIN' ALONG

One hundred and fifty feet above the Mississippi river hangs the nose of a truck van that smashed through the railing of the Eads bridge in St. Louis, Mo. The driver escaped with minor injuries. The upflung hood of the truck looks like a mouth open to scream. But old man river kept placidly on his way, retaining his reputation for sayin' and doin' nothin'.

On Living In An Apartment

Living in an apartment has its advantages—also its disadvantages. Landlords are peculiar people. Janitors more peculiar.

Let me deal first with the latter, the dweller in an apartment is closer to the janitor than he is to the landlord. What would you think of a janitor who would run the tempo of your apartment up to 84 degrees in a day when there was no particular need for excess heat, then drop it down to 55 for some reason wholly unknown. Once he came home at four o'clock in the morning, put on a fire which made every radiator in the building rattle? Perhaps the answer lies in his peculiar sense of humor.

I know one man in the apartment who went to the janitor a day or two before Christmas telling him that he had two little girls and "so help me" he said, "they definitely believe in Santa Claus and I want heat in that apartment at six o'clock in the morning because we can't get clothes on them until they have seen what Santa has for them. We just must have the place warm." His magic worked, the house was warm. Even the janitor has a heart on Christmas Day.

If janitors are peculiar, so also are landlords. There are a good many landlords who have a definite sense of responsibility and do everything they possibly can to provide reasonable comfort. They promptly repair their land and equipment as circumstance demand. Then there are those who feel that they increase the value of their own property by letting everything run down. They would not spend 50c on a repair job even if they knew that in the long run, it would save them $50.00.

All this comes back to one thing. We couldn't build houses during the war. We hadn't labor or materials. Rent's were fixed because they had to be fixed. We couldn't send a man to the front to fight for us and kick his family out while he was away doing it. Nor could we do it when he came home. Building costs were high, so now housing is scarce and there we are. Some day this problem has to be faced. If prices fall it might be remedied soon but if prices do not decline the problem will get out of hand—it will be solved in the end by pain and difficulty there is no royal road to cheap housing.

I wasn't hungry last night. The watchful guardian of my home wanted to know the reason. In brief I didn't want food. Later I put on the coffee pot. Then something else attracted my attention and I forgot about it. It was a bit overdone. I took a cup of it, and went to bed about ten o'clock. The little demons of the drink got me. Coffee rarely keeps me awake. At four a.m. I was still awake. Then I stopped rolling around and twisting the covers from place to place. I started to write

POT HOLE DAM OFFICIALLY NAMED 'JENSEN RESERVOIR'

from The Magrath Mirror
Recently there has been much speculation as to the possibility of naming the lake formed by the Pot Hole Contee Dam, in a fitting celebration during our Jubilee celebration. This however, is impossible as it has been named already.

About one year ago now, certain people in town were given to understand that the lake was to be named "Pot Hole Reservoir". Not liking this, they began looking for a name and thought it would be nice to name it after Mr. Christian Jensen, who served 20 years as chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Magrath Irrigation District.

This idea was presented to the rate payers of the irrigation district at their annual meeting, held last January. The meeting approved and the secretary, Mr. Horace Ririe, was instructed to try to get the lake and dam named "Jensen Reservoir" and "Jensen Dam".

As a result the following item will appear in the Annual Report of the Geographic Board of Alberta.

"These (referring to the lake and dam) were named after Mr. Christian Jensen, who was chairman of the Magrath Irrigation District for more than twenty years. He has also been prominent in the activities of the Wheat Pool."

It should be noted that Mr. Jensen worked very closely with Mr. J. W. Evans of Raymond, and through their combined efforts Magrath is the centre of a great irrigation area.
